1. Please modify the references style as indicated in Instruction for Authors on the website <http://www.degruyter.com/view/jrjim>

An example of correct reference is this [1]. (please DO NOT USE SUPERSRIPT!) and please insert every reference in text in [] and not in ()! Also please do not include DOI numbers in the bibliography!

REVIEWER #1 COMMENTS

1. Please report what software you used for the Statistical analysis.
2. Please include what HOMA-IR stands for?
3. Repetition of wording "The prevalence of overweight" in the Introduction section. Please rephrase.
4. Discussion section, typo: Please correct "The second possible explanation..."
5. Period is missing in the last sentence in Conclusions section.
6. Kolmogorov-Smirnov is ok for assessing normality, however, Shapiro-Wilks is more appropriate, no need for any change though.

REVIEWER #2 COMMENTS

The topic of this paper is interesting but there are some critical issues that should be considered:

- I would check again the manuscript for the English language.
- I would better discuss the "conclusions" in the paragraph discussion, more in deep a would do a "brief compendium" of the discussion elements showing the main results as key points of the study, before the lines "limitations".
- I would add some interesting recent evidences as background in the paragraph "introduction". A recent paper discusses the topic "Male PCOS equivalent and nutritional restriction". Male PCOS is the male equivalent for the female PCOS syndrome and has characteristic similar to the population investigated in your study. I would focus on these characteristics, especially on metabolic pattern, cardiovascular risk and role of the nutritional restriction for in these patients.

Title should exclude "ANALYSIS OF".

Introduction is well written.

Patients and Methods: Obesity should be measured by BMI (weight (kg) /height m²) above 30. These parameters are lacking from the analysis / results. Please include them. How is testosterone levels according to subject's age ?

Table 1 should express comparative parameters between study and control group.

According to IDF for south Asian ethnic group male, WC> 90 cm is characteristic for central obesity. However, obesity should be defined by BMI >30. The analysis should be repeated for HOMA / IR and testosterone values according to BMI / obesity degree.

References should be updated, some are older than 10 years.
