Dear F1000 Team,

Kindly provide Author details for "Unpublished data" for this article 53946:

East Nusa Tenggara and West Papua are known as malaria-endemic province areas in Indonesia as their annual parasite incidence (API) in 2015 was 31.29% and 7.04%, respectively (Kemenkes RI, 2016), ¹³ while in 2018 2018 was 8.49% and 3.42%, respectively. Even though there was a decrease in API numbers, according to the health office in both the districts, the API rate in Fakfak, West Papua and East Nusa Tenggara, West Sumba still high cases, which have was 4.85% and 12.9%, respectively. (unpublished data) The trend of malaria cases in each region is different, although reports in several provinces have decreased, both areas still have a high malaria incidence. Due to this situation, we aimed to
